Make plans now to join us next year...
Saturday, October 3, 2026 in Springfield, MO!

HELLO FROM THE EDITORS

As we head into the close of another year, there's a lot to feel optimistic about in the Hereford community. Cattle markets are strong, enthusiasm is high, and momentum continues to build across the state of Missouri. It's a great time to be in the cattle business.

We're especially excited to welcome Larry Day as the new Secretary/Treasurer of the Missouri Hereford Association. Larry's leadership and passion for the breed are sure to bring fresh energy and perspective, and we can't wait to see where he helps take our association next.

This issue serves as a poignant reminder that the heart of this breed lies in its people, and there's room for everyone to play a part. Whether it's volunteering at an event, attending meetings, or simply inviting a friend to join an association activity, every effort helps move our association forward.

We hope to see many of you at Hereford Weekend, November 1-2, in Sedalia, MO, for the annual meeting, banquet, and Opportunity Sale. It's always a highlight of the year and a chance to connect with fellow breeders, celebrate progress, and plan for what's ahead.

As the holidays approach, may you take a moment to reflect on what you're thankful for — the people, the cattle, and the purpose that ties us all together. Reach out to a friend you haven't talked to in a while, invest in new genetics, or step out of your comfort zone to try something new that benefits both you and your operation.

Together, we can continue to promote this incredible breed and the industry we're proud to be part of.

Wishing you all a successful and gratitude-filled season,

The RRC Team

STATE ASSOCIATION UPDATE

Missouri Hereford Weekend updates

Written by Larry Day

Fellow Hereford breeders and enthusiasts,

What a time to be involved in the cattle business, especially the Hereford breed. Show season is wrapping up with the numbers of Hereford livestock and exhibitors surpassing previous years. The level of excitement and enthusiasm throughout the barns and stalls of the shows I attended this past spring and summer is unreal. The state of the cattle industry with demand and prices at all-time highs definitely plays a part in this, but with the many qualities to offer, Herefords have experienced a level of popularity not seen in a while. The great improvements made within the breed are being noticed with Herefords winning major events here in our state. Herefords are still a breed not a color!

Sale season is in full swing, several Missouri Hereford Association members offer animals and frozen genetics from their programs through annual production sales, online format sales, combined and consignment type sales and live animal displays. Each of these are opportunities for you to improve your genetic base. A great Opportunity for all will be found at noon on Sunday, November 2 during the Missouri Opportunity Sale. Be sure to check out the excellent genetics both live and frozen being offered. Speaking of the Hereford Weekend, make plans to attend the annual meeting and banquet Saturday, November 1, in the Taylor Woods Youth Building on the Missouri State Fairgrounds. Meeting will begin at 5 p.m., meal at 6 p.m. with awards and live auction to follow. Lists of lodging choices can be found inside the cover of the Missouri Opportunity sale catalog.

We extend a huge thanks to the Wood, Sweiger and Thompson families for hosting the Missouri Hereford Field Day, which was held in Northwest Missouri. This annual event is a great opportunity to visit fellow members' operations. These events are a great way to interact with fellow members by viewing cattle and the production practices they implement. Members always have a good time with excellent food, fellowship and Hereford cattle. Make plans now as we travel to the Southwest part of the state in 2026.

In closing I would like to thank the board of directors for selecting me to be your Secretary/Treasurer. I am looking forward to promoting Herefords in Missouri and surrounding states. I will be keeping you informed of happenings and events within our organization. Be on the lookout for another avenue of communication that will be available to each of you.

A WORD FROM THE ADVISORS

Dues reminder and JNHE shirt fundraiser

Written by Marijane and Hayley Miller

After a hot and dry summer, it sure is refreshing to get a little moisture (stressing the little part) and a little relief from the heat. Fall calving is almost over, and it is time to start breeding cows. Before you know it, Thanksgiving and Christmas will be here. We have so many opportunities to be thankful for.

Speaking of opportunities, the Missouri Hereford Opportunity Sale and Annual Banquet is scheduled for November 1 and 2. Larry Day has been working diligently to get the consigners lined up and making this a great sale. The annual banquet will be held on Saturday evening with the sale beginning at noon on Sunday.

The juniors will once again be auctioning off the back of the state T-shirts that all members wear at the Junior National Hereford Expo (JNHE). This is a wonderful advertising tool for your farm or ranch.

This is also a great time to pay your Missouri Junior Hereford Association (MJHA) dues. They are $15 annually. If you cannot attend the sale, you can mail your dues to Tory Miller, Treasurer at 20500 Sioux Dr, Lebanon, MO 65536, or send via Venmo. All dues must be paid by April 15 of each year for the member to serve as a state delegate at JNHE, be a candidate for Outstanding MJHA member, to vote in elections or receive other awards from MJHA.

We hope everyone can make it to the banquet and sale. Have a blessed holiday season.

BUILDING A LEGACY IN HEREFORDS

The Miller Family

Written by Cayley Brown

When Rusty and Marijane Miller packed up their family and left Indiana for the rolling pastures of Lebanon, Missouri, they weren't just changing their zip code. They were embracing a new chapter, one that would center on cattle, family, and faith.

"It was a long process," Marijane remembered of the 2012 move. "We wanted to get out of row crops and just raise cattle. Missouri felt like the best place for that." She and the children—Clayton, Jody, Hayley, Tory, and Taylor—moved ahead, so the kids could begin school, while Rusty stayed behind to wrap up their life in Indiana.

"To move a farm from one state to another took all of us," Marijane says. "It was a true family undertaking."

Generations of Herefords

The Miller's story with Herefords began long before the move to Missouri. Rusty grew up in the breed, showing cattle alongside his siblings. His father, George Miller, purchased his first Hereford as a 4-H project, an investment that sparked a lifelong passion and led to the founding of Miller Herefords in Indiana. Rusty carried the torch forward, buying into his dad's cow herd as a teenager.

Now, the Millers represent four active generations tied to the Hereford breed. Their oldest son, Clayton, and his wife, Chelsea, live in Kearney, Missouri, where Clayton serves as cow herd manager at Wright Charolais. They are raising four children—Luke, Kora, Emma, and Lany—who already spend a great deal of time around cattle. Their daughter Hayley lives just down the road from the farm and works as an agricultural teacher and FFA advisor at Lebanon High School. Their daughter Jody also makes her home in Lebanon with her two sons, Stetson and Slayton. Taylor, another daughter, lives in Conway with her husband, Garrett Wood, and teaches third grade at Maplecrest Elementary in Lebanon. The youngest, Tory, is a senior at Missouri State University, majoring in Agricultural Business, while still living at home. All five children were raised showing cattle and remain closely connected to the family's Hereford program.

The next chapter is unfolding as the grandchildren begin to step into the ring. Luke, their oldest grandson, at age nine, has already started showing, carrying on the tradition, even though his first calf happened to be a Charolais cross.

Rusty Miller as a child with a Hereford calf.

"The rest of the grandkids are still too young," Marijane says, "but they'll all be showing cattle soon enough."

A Family-Centered Way of Life

From the start, Miller Herefords has been defined by family. Rusty and Marijane's children grew up on the farm, learning their first lessons in responsibility by preparing show and sale cattle, doing chores, and working alongside their dad.

Hayley remembers those early days vividly saying, "We didn't always sit down and practice math at the kitchen table. We often learned by counting cows or helping with chores. Dad would let us drive or help with cattle work at a young age. He gave us the chance to learn, and it made us want to keep doing it."

Even now, as young adults, the Miller kids stay involved. Each has cattle within the larger herd, and when a big project arises, whether it's working calves or preparing for a sale, everyone comes back home to help.

"The biggest blessing is that we truly get to do it as a family," Tory reflects, "Whether we're at a show or at home where no one's watching, it's still all of us together."

For Marijane, the cattle have been a backdrop to something greater. "My proudest accomplishment is watching our kids grow into mature, responsible adults who care about people and animals. That's the true legacy," she says.

Family. God. Nature.

The Miller motto is simple: Family. God. Nature. They don't just talk about their values, they live them.

"God is the most important above all," Marijane says. "He's the reason we're all here. Then, family—we do everything as a family. And nature—we rely on it every single day to provide."

This emphasis on faith and family also guides the way they promote their program. Their website echoes these same sentiments, reflecting their belief that honesty, hard work, and gratitude for God's creation are at the heart of raising cattle.

Foundations of Quality

Today, Miller Herefords markets breeding bulls, commercial-influenced Hereford heifers, and show heifers. They also run a successful custom embryo transfer program, raising calves for clients such as Allen Miller of Prairie View Farms Angus.

On the purebred Hereford side of things, Rusty leads most of the breeding decisions, always with an eye toward balance.

"We've tried to stay in the middle of the big trends," he explained. "That way we can go either way when we need to shift.”

Selection is grounded in expected progeny differences (EPDs), phenotype, and disposition.

“We can’t sell bulls with bad EPDs,” Rusty said. “Cattle have to be sound, easy-going, and the kind people want to use.”

Hayley adds that show cattle must fit into the bigger picture.

“Our show heifers don’t just show, they have to go on and make productive cows in the herd.”

Over the years, key cow families have shaped their breeding program. One donor of significant note is RR MH GOLDEN LADY 9540 and her influential daughters, including MH 29F Miss Online 8367 ET, who went on to be Grand Champion Cow-Calf at the Junior National Hereford Expo (JNHE).

“Those cows made us who we are today,” Rusty said. The Miller name is well known at shows across Missouri and beyond. Their big wins at JNHE include Reserve Carcass Steer, Reserve Bred-and-Owned Heifer, Champion Bull, and Reserve Bred-and-Owned Cow-Calf at Junior Nationals, in addition to state-level wins at the Tulsa State Fair, the Missouri State Fair, and the Ozark Empire Fair Junior Show. Notably, all the cattle the kids have exhibited over the years have been bred-and-owned animals.

“Our first big Junior National win came in 2007,” Hayley recalls. “Since then, it’s been steady. Each banner is special, but what matters is that we did it together.”

Investing in Youth and Leadership

The Millers’ commitment to the breed extends beyond their own herd. Rusty serves on the Missouri Hereford Association (MHA) board, where he sees opportunity in connecting Hereford bulls with commercial cattlemen.

“Through the annual Opportunity Sale, we’re working to put more Hereford genetics into commercial herds,” he said. “We’ve also added commercial heifers to draw in more people, and it seems to be working.”

Marijane and Hayley both serve as advisors to the Missouri Junior Hereford Association (MJHA), guiding the development of youth leadership.

“The juniors are very excited about the breed,” Marijane said. “They all have their own ideas about leadership, and they’re strong leaders. The future of Herefords looks very promising.”

The Miller children have also taken on leadership roles of their own. Tory has served as secretary and now treasurer of the MJHA, while Taylor has held the treasurer position.

“It’s just cool to be part of an organization that shares the same values and passion you do,” Tory says.

As an ag teacher, Hayley often draws from her Hereford roots when mentoring students.

"I tell them, don't be afraid to ask questions," Hayley says "Watch people you admire, learn from them, and get involved. That's what this breed gave me, and I want to pass it on."

Looking to the Future

As the Miller family looks ahead, their goals remain steady: breed sound, functional cattle and continually improve with each generation.

"The Hereford breed is getting so good that it's hard to stay on top," Rusty admitted. "But we just want to keep moving forward, keep making them better."

As the kids are aging out of junior shows, the Millers also hope to place quality heifers in the hands of other young breeders.

"It's exciting to watch other people succeed with cattle that came from us," Rusty says.

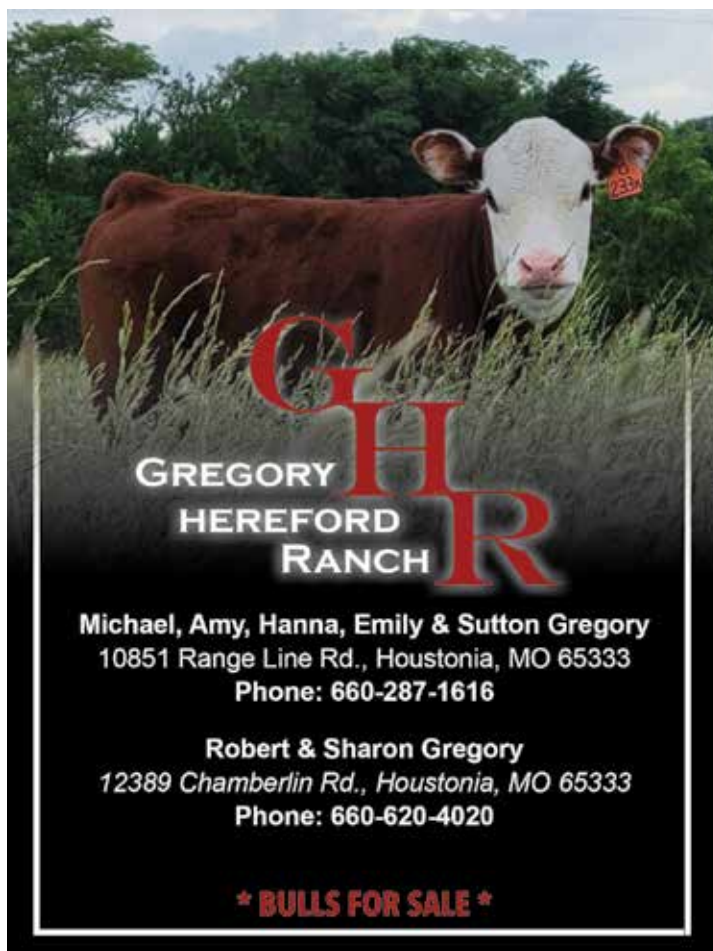

The Miller family believes the excitement lies not only in cattle but in the people who surround them.

"We've tried to teach our kids to have compassion and to cheer people on," says Marijane. "It's not just about cattle, it's about family, and it's about people."

From George Miller's first Hereford 4-H project to today's multi-generation farm in Missouri, Miller Herefords has always been about more than cattle. It's about building a life rooted in faith, raising children who care deeply, and showing the power of doing things together.

"We eat and breathe show cattle," Hayley says with a smile. "But really, it's family that makes it all possible."

GUIDING THE ASSOCIATION FORWARD

Larry Day begins as Secretary/Treasurer

Written by Cayley Brown

The Missouri Hereford Association (MHA) proudly welcomes Larry Day of Pilot Grove, Missouri, as the new Secretary/Treasurer. Day is no stranger to the breed or the Association. As a third-generation Hereford breeder, he and his wife Pam manage Day's Family Farm alongside their children and grandchildren; thus marking three active generations on the farm today and ensuring a fourth and fifth are ready to carry on the legacy.

Day has spent more than 60 years immersed in Hereford cattle. He previously served as a board member, Vice President, and President of the MHA, as well as managing the long-running Central Missouri Polled Hereford Breeders Association sale and the Missouri Opportunity Sale. Now, as he transitions daily farm duties to the next generations and approaches retirement from his off-farm career, Day is eager to step into a role that will keep him active in the breed and close to the people he values most.

"I believe the Secretary/Treasurer role is really the glue that holds the Association together," Day explains. "My goal is to keep members connected, listen to their concerns, and pass them along to the right people, so we can continue moving forward."

For Day, the Secretary/Treasurer position is about more than keeping the books in order; it's also about keeping people connected. While he's committed to staying on top of the details that keep the Association running smoothly, he emphasized that his top priority is membership growth and engagement.

"The Association used to be a place where people looked forward to the events; there was excitement, celebrations, and camaraderie," he reflects. "Some of that has naturally fallen off, but I think we can bring it back. There are enough young people coming into the breed that we can build momentum again."

Day's philosophy centers on listening to members and creating opportunities for all breeders, regardless of herd size.

"Whether you're a 20-cow mom-and-pop herd or a 200-cow operation, everyone deserves equal opportunities to succeed," he says. "Every program is unique, and every breeder should be proud of what they've built. My goal is to help create avenues for learning and marketing that level the playing field."

When asked about lessons learned from past leadership roles, Day highlighted the importance of honesty and accountability.

"I try to live by 'say what you're going to do, then follow through and do it,'" he says. "Trust and respect are earned. I treat people as I'd want to be treated, and often, I aim to treat people even better."

Day sees significant opportunities for Hereford genetics in Missouri's cow herds, particularly through crossbreeding. With the state's average herd size under 25 cows, he believes Hereford bulls can provide a significant impact for small to mid-sized operations.

"The studies on crossbreeding with Herefords have shown tremendous results," he explains. "We can add pounds at sale time, improve efficiency, and bring value to commercial herds. Together, we can make black calves better one white face at a time."

Day is also committed to communication and availability.

"I want members to know that I am here for them," he says. "Call, text, or email me; I'll always get back to you. It may not be within five minutes, but I'll find the answer and follow through. This is a people business, and I'm a people person. What I can do for an individual breeder will ultimately help strengthen the Association."

He is also quick to credit his wife, Pam, for supporting him in this role, just as she has in their farm and sale management work. Together, they look forward to serving the Missouri Hereford Association in this new chapter.

With decades of involvement in the breed, a clear vision for growth, and a heart for the Hereford community, Larry Day steps into his new role with enthusiasm and purpose. His steady leadership and approachable style promise to keep the Missouri Hereford Association strong, connected, and moving forward.

BRANDT TAPPED FOR CENTRAL REGION

Adapted from the American Hereford Association

Iowa native Austin Brandt started with the American Hereford Association (AHA) as central region field representative September 9. His territory includes Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri and Nebraska.

Brandt will represent AHA members in the region, attending Hereford sales and events and working to broaden relationships across the industry. He will also help Hereford breeders and commercial users of Hereford genetics utilize AHA promotional and marketing programs.

In addition to part of the north central region — Kansas, Minnesota and Nebraska — Brandt takes over Iowa and Missouri for Joe Rickabaugh, who retired in January of this year.

“We are thrilled to welcome Austin to the AHA,” says Kane Aegerter, AHA director of seedstock marketing. “His background and expertise in the livestock marketing industry will ensure a smooth transition into this role. We are confident he will serve the central region with the highest level of dedication and professionalism.

Brandt grew up showing cattle across the country and served on the National Junior Angus Association board. He’s been involved in livestock marketing for almost 15 years, working for Livestock Plus for nearly a decade before taking over Lee AgriMedia/Midwest Marketer. Brandt contributes much of his knowledge to invaluable mentors and connections. He was born and raised in Corning, Iowa, and currently resides there with his family.

“I am very excited to be joining the staff at AHA and to continue the long-standing tradition of top-quality service to its members and customers. The entire AHA membership has dedicated themselves to delivering the best possible product they can for their customers, and I intend to do the same for them,” Brandt says. “I know I have some big shoes to fill in Iowa and Missouri, taking over for Joe, but I am ready to get after it.”

Brandt can be contacted at 712-621-1829 or at abrandt@hereford.org.
